

Research Endorsement Survey

Provide responses to the following criteria for fellow applicant

Research Criteria

Unusual and outstanding contributions or performance in research is typically documented by sustained research-based publications in refereed journals. Thus, important considerations may include: a strong publication record; favorable citation and use of one's work by others; development of an influential theory or research method; or qualitative or quantitative empirical findings that contribute to the knowledge base of community research and action.

The following types of contributions do not generally provide convincing evidence of the impact of a nominee's work: abstracts; reports in press or preparation; book chapters in a collection that is co-edited by the nominee; publications limited to a single collection of data; and a long list of publications where the nominee is not primary author and the nominee's role is not explained.

The submission deadline is December 15th @ 5pm EST.
